

Future Continuous

Listen to two people talk about what life might be like in 100 years.

Life in 100 Years

Man: What will people be doing in 100 years?

Woman: That's an interesting question.

Man: Will people still be driving cars?

Woman: I think people will still be driving cars.

Man: Really, I don't think we will.

Woman: Oh yeah! How will we be getting around?

Man: People will be flying small planes or aircraft, I think.

Woman: That would be cool!

Man: So, where will be people living in 100 years?

Woman: I think more people will be living in the country.

Man: Really, not in the cities!

Woman: No, I think more people will be living off the land, and growing their own food.

Man: I doubt we will be doing that.

Woman: You never know!

Man: So will schools still be using text books?

Woman: Yes, but only on rare occasions.

Man: What will we be using instead?

Woman: I think we'll be using chips in our head.

Man: Oh, that sounds freaky.

Woman: Trust me. People will be doing this.

Man: So, will people still be getting married?

Woman: Yes, but they won't be having weddings.

Man: What will they do instead?

Woman: I'm not sure. Just something different.

Man: Well, we won't be living anymore, so we'll never know!
